

Huygens's 123-foot-long refractor

Huygens's open-air telescope had two short tubes at each end, to hold the lenses. The tubes were aligned with the help of a cord that ran between them.

